Sushi Knife

The Yanagiba model Sushi Knife, with its blade being long, thin and pointed has been designed specifically for precise slicing with minimum strain. Effortless slicing through sushi rolls or fish is the hallmark of this Yanagiba modeled blade.

Tracing its history to the Samurai sword, it retains the essential character of the sword-sleek, sharp and precise. The Mune (spine) of the blade and the Kissaki (tip) have been hand polished to ensure absolute perfection. Rubber wood handle ensures long lasting & hassle free usage, with the steel ring in the handle affording the user, perfect balance.

Santoku Knife

三徳包丁,

meaning "Three virtues knife" or "Three uses knife"...The Santoku Knife resembles a sheep's foot-tipped blade that curves down at an angle. The term Santoku refers to the wide variety of ingredients that the knife can handle: fish, meat, and vegetables, or to the tasks it can perform: chopping, dicing, and slicing, with either interpretation indicating a multi-use, general-purpose kitchen knife. The term bunka, refers to how it is used for the cultural food of Japan. The blade and handle of the santoku are designed to work in harmony by matching the blade's width and weight to the weight of the tang and the handle.... The Fluted edge blade ensures easy handling of all ingredients it is used upon.

Knife Accessories

1. Honing & Sharpening

When a knife gets dull, the sharp edge has been lost and/or the blade's edge is no longer aligned properly due to use. Even if the blade is still sharp, just losing that alignment means that it won't cut through food properly.

Microscopic image of a dull edge

✿Honing : A honing steel basically pushes the edge of the knife back to the center and straightens it. It corrects the edge without shaving off much, if any, of the blade's material. Honing doesn't actually sharpen the knife, but the knife will seem sharper because the blade is now in the proper position. Honing should be done very often — even, at least once a day. This is where Sharpening Rods play their crucial role.

Sharpeners - Colours :

Product Code	Master Carton	Inner Carton	Blade Length	Diameter	Weight	MRP
MS10601	30	10	10"	20mm	310gm	₹650/-
MS10701	30	6	12"	20mm	335gm	₹750/-
MS10801	20	10	14"	20mm	349gm	₹850/-

✿Sharpening : Sharpening, on the other hand, is a process where bits of the blade are ground and shaved off to produce a new, sharp edge. It can be done using a stone. Sharpening can be done less frequently than honing — just a few times a year depending on how much use the knife is put to. We bring the Silicon Carbide stone, made with German technology, which minimises damage to the Steel.
